September 29, 2015,

Dear Representative,

On behalf of Americans for Financial Reform, we are writing to urge your opposition to HR 957, the “Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection-Inspector General Reform Act of 2015” (Stivers), to establish an independent Inspector General for the CFPB. The proposal would not benefit consumers and, further, is an effort by the committee to make government bigger, not better.

The CFPB was established by the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act of 2010, and opened its doors as the nation’s only financial regulator completely devoted to consumer protection in July 2011. Since then, the CFPB has been protecting consumers by ensuring that markets work in an open, transparent, and fair way. The Bureau’s mission is to hold financial companies accountable for being up front about the costs of, and risks associated with, their products, and also to ensure that consumers are treated with dignity and respect, rather than set up to fail. The Bureau has successfully gone to bat for consumers, delivering results that are making markets work more fairly and putting a stop to fraud and abuse.

This proposal will not protect the public or increase agency accountability; instead it is part of a continuing pattern of mischaracterizing the CFPB’s organization and processes.

H.R. 957 would create a separate, independent inspector general (IG) for the CFPB and would require the IG to appear at semi-annual hearings of the House Financial Services Committee and Energy and Commerce Committee and the Senate Banking Committee. This legislation is unnecessary because the CFPB already has an IG, shared with the Federal Reserve, within which the CFPB is housed. Since the CFPB sits administratively inside the Federal Reserve, it is illogical not to have it under a single shared IG with the board, a system that has worked well. The Dodd-Frank Act of 2010 established that the Federal Reserve’s Office of Inspector General has oversight authority for Bureau, conducting audits, investigations, and other necessary reviews.

The current Inspector General’s detailed work plan for CFPB oversight lays out the fact that the IG has completed, is conducting, and is planning a variety of CFPB oversight functions. In fact, in 2015 alone, the IG has issued 10 reports on CFPB operations. The current IG has repeatedly stated in letters to Congress and to the Bipartisan Policy Center, that it has the authority, resources, and independence to conduct oversight activities of the CFPB. There is no evidence that the existing structure is inadequate. Instead, the bill looks to be an effort to send a message that the Bureau lacks oversight, when in reality proper oversight systems are in place.

We urge opposition to HR 957 and to all legislation that would jeopardize the CFPB’s ability to protect the public. For example, today the Committee is also expected to consider HR 1266 (Neugebauer), which would eliminate the CFPB's single director structure and replace the director with a 5-member commission. We urge your strong opposition to that bill as well.

Sincerely,

Americans for Financial Reform
