February 6, 2013

The Honorable Dick Durbin United States Senate 711 Hart Senate Building Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Durbin:

On behalf of the undersigned organizations, we are writing to express our strong support for the Fairness for Struggling Students Act of 2013 (S. 114).

Private education loans are one of the riskiest, most expensive ways to pay for college. Like credit cards, they typically have variable interest rates that are higher for those who can least afford them. However, private education loans are treated much more harshly in bankruptcy than credit cards and other comparable types of debt.

Private loan borrowers also lack access to the important deferment, income-based repayment, and loan forgiveness options that accompany federal student loans. This leaves most private loan borrowers at the mercy of the lender if they face financial distress due to unemployment, disability, illness, or military deployment, or when a school shuts down before they can finish their certificate or degree. The recent sudden closures of for-profit colleges in Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island underscore the urgent need for the Fairness for Struggling Students Act of 2013.

The congressionally mandated July 2012 report from the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau and Department of Education documented the need for bankruptcy relief for struggling private loan borrowers. It is both inappropriate and unfair to distressed borrowers to treat private education loans more harshly than comparable types of debt. Your bill would restore fairness for struggling Americans who pursued the American dream through higher education and training, only to find themselves in financial distress. Representing students, consumers, higher education institutions, faculty and staff, as well as civil rights and public policy organizations, our broad and growing coalition thanks you for your continued leadership on this important issue.

Sincerely,
