

Consumer group urges FCC to protect consumer access to phone and communication services during the technology transition

The group urges FCC to swiftly resolve the pending rulemaking proceeding which seeks to establish rules governing the “technology transition” from traditional copper line service, establish backup power standards, and create standards governing when telephone companies have de facto retired their lines by failing to maintain adequate service. Read more >>>